Vosts? Vests!—Every Gentleman of Cormet taste appreciates the importance of this article of times, in which, perhaps, the character of the wearer is perhably more completely expressed than in any other garment. A handreme and good fitting vest is a disderatem with every one who wishes to dress well. J. C. Booth, taverably known for many years is connection with the tailoring business, is particularly distinguished for the superiority of his make in this department. Hr. Booth has resently opened rooms at 436 Broadway, where he will do very lift of custom work in a manner and style unurposced, at reduced prices, and where the best fitting and most gent-el garment in New York can be obtained. Give him a trial, and do not forget the number.

Genin's Winter Hat.—The Lending Style of winter hats recently brought out by Gesin seems to have factinated the "public era." Even those who are "nothing if not critical," have failed to discover a flaw in it. Beautiful in its preportions, elegant is abape, perfect in finish—it is in all respects the hat of a gentleman. Besides his leading dress hat, Genin has this searon produced an entirely new fabric—the beaver felt hat—for which there has been, and still certinues to be, an urgent demard. Every season he is erabled to make some improvement unon all his former febrics; but this is all clear gain to his customers, as the price res ains fixed "at the needle to the pole," at the old figure—four dellars.
